Gentry stresses financial accountability

By Ray Urchel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Robert E. Gentry, newly appointed vice president for fiscal affairs, Thursday promised to work with President Warren Brandt and the Board of Trustees to improve financial accountability of the University to state agencies.

Robert E. Gentry

SIU medical insurance up $400,000

The cost of liability and malpractice insurance for the SIU system has increased by $400,000 over last year, Joe Yusko, director of the University risk management, said Thursday.

Last year the SIU system paid $118,000 for liability and malpractice coverage, he said. The cost has risen to $551,000 this year.

Yusko cited increased malpractice insurance costs and a moderate increase in the number of medical personnel the system employs as the reasons for the hike in premiums. He called the amount of the increase "ridiculous."

The University will have to pay for the increase with state-appropriated funds and operating revenues in the 1976 budget. Yusko said that about 60 percent of the cost will be paid out of the School Medicine budget.

There are 692 medical personnel at SIU campuses. The SIU campuses have had two minor malpractice claims and a few liability insurance claims over the last two years, Yusko said.

He said the University could consider several possible ways of lessening insurance costs. He said that one alternative could be the establishment of a $100,000 deductible clause for each malpractice incident. Under this type of plan, SIU would pay the first $100,000 of any claim. SIU could also develop a co-insurer policy under which the University and the insurance company would each pay a fixed percentage of the cost of a claim, Yusko said.

Gentry, former associate vice president for business and finance for the 14-campus University of Wisconsin system, assumed his SIU post Monday. George R. Mace served as acting vice president for fiscal affairs prior to Gentry's appointment.

Gentry pledged that he would practice a candid fiscal affairs policy. "I support a policy of full disclosure and openness about all aspects of the University," said Gentry, who will receive a $40,000 a year salary. "I would welcome requests for information from any interested party about the University."

Gentry, 50, said the University may bring in a consultant to develop a computerized accounting system. He said SIU is not using its present computer facilities for accounting procedures as much as it should.

"The present system is good. It's reliable, but it's not as responsive to new requirements and prompt reporting" as it could be, Gentry said.

He said the increased use of the computer, which he hopes to have ready by July, 1977, would free some staff members to do other jobs. "I don't envision people losing their jobs."

He said the cost of bringing in an outside computer consultant or firm could range from $20,000 to $100,000. "It's not an annual cost. It's a cost that you can see the benefits of for many years," Gentry said.

Gentry said that a trend in higher education is for the state legislatures to allocate less money to colleges and universities than they have in the past and hold the institutions more accountable for the funds they get.

SIU needs to present its budget situation to the legislature "in an articulate manner," improve the efficiency of current programs and try to obtain additional funding sources, he said.

"It may not be a pleasant thing to discuss, but a decision may have to be made regarding how much of a (financial) burden students have to bear," Gentry added. He said the University may have to raise tuition and fees or consider eliminating programs if it does not get sufficient funding.

The new vice president said he sees high quality programs accessible to all students as an ideal, but said, "It doesn't look like we are going to be able to do that."

Gentry said Brandt and the Board of Trustees may be faced with some hard fiscal decisions.

"The decisions in large measure will rest on financial data we can provide," he said. "I would expect to discuss these matters with the president and other members of his staff and give them my thoughts on the matter."

He noted that Brandt has been keeping him informed on University fiscal matters since he accepted the appointment in January.

Buzbee bill may cut Styrest funding

By Dan Hofmann
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

State Sen. Ken Buzbee, D-Carbondale, said he will sponsor a bill next fall requiring the Styrest Nursing Home, 120 Tower Road, to pay for educational facilities for 80 severely mentally and physically handicapped children now living at the home.

"It is not proper for the taxpayers to pay rent to a private entrepreneur to pay for the use of his own classroom," Buzbee said Wednesday while speaking to a group of parents and educators at Carbondale Community High School East on issues in education.

The Carbondale Elementary School District 95 and Community High School District 165 pay $2,000 monthly for the use of classroom space at Styrest, according to Marvin Ott, director of the educational program for the handicapped children at Styrest.

The 1975 Orphanage Act requires local school districts to provide an education for handicapped children housed in private facilities in the state.

Buzbee said that because Styrest recruits handicapped children from different areas of the state, the child's home school district should be responsible for providing the classroom space.

Ott has said that only seven of the children at the home are from Southern Illinois and that only three of those seven are from Carbondale. Most of the children are from Northern Illinois and the Chicago area.

Buzbee was joined in the discussion by State Reps. Ralph Dunn, R-DuQuoin, and Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, and Joe Dakin, who is running as a Republican candidate for state representative from Carbondale.

All of the speakers said they would be in favor of some sort of re-evaluation of programs mandated by the State Board of Education.

Buzbee said he questioned the implementation of many mandated courses, and gave consumer education as an example. "I think it is important, but it doesn't mean you have to go out and hire an expert," Buzbee said he felt consumer education could be taught in social studies and home economics classes.

Dakin said the personal property tax is "about the most unfair tax that we have." He said that although it would be politically wise to cut back on personal property taxes, he would find it frightening to lose the support which the tax provides for schools.

Buzbee said he could be in favor of eliminating the personal property tax, but warned that it could mean the loss of local control over school curriculum.

Dunn said school districts may not get funding for summer school programs. He said there is not enough money in the state treasury for summer school programs and said, "I think the way we're going, we (the state) may be $100 to 200 million in the red at the end of this fiscal year."

Huebschmann elected president of GSC

By Mike Springston
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Ray Huebschmann, graduate in special education, was elected president of the Graduate Student Council (GSC) Wednesday night.

Huebschmann, who has served as the GSC representative to the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) Student Advisory Committee for the past year, said GSC has made considerable gains under the leadership of this year's president, Ellen Schanzle-Haskins.

"I hope we can maintain the influence we've gained and will continue the expansion," Huebschmann said. "It's going to be a hell of an act to follow."

Huebschmann, who opposed the IBHE proposed tuition increase at Master Plan-Phase Four hearings, said his role as president would be more of an administrator than a policy maker.

"We have lots of good minds from a lot of different areas, and people in GSC are not used to others making decisions for them. I'll be the representative of the GSC at the University," Huebschmann said.

Huebschmann, who earned a M.A. in psychology at Sangamon State University, said GSC has been effective in the past by considering different alternatives to various University problems. Huebschmann said the parking arrangement for the new parking garage located next to the Faner Building originated at a GSC meeting.

"If GSC continues to consider various alternatives in coming up with the best choice, the administration will listen," Huebschmann said.

Huebschmann, who has been a GSC representative from special education for two years, said he hoped GSC would have a good working relationship with Student Government.

"I think Ellen Schanzle-Haskins and Doug Diggle have worked together fairly well," Huebschmann said. "I'd like to keep up the good relations. I think I can work well with (Tom) Jones (Student President-elect)."

Huebschmann said the GSC now has a chance to get involved in national student politics since C. Michael Gibbons, GSC representative from higher education, is a member of the National Student Lobby (NSL) Board of Directors, but Huebschmann said he did not know how much support GSC would give the NSL.

Along with Huebschmann, GSC elected three other executive officers and five representatives to the Graduate Council.

Lloyd Worley, graduate in English, was elected vice president. Jerry Haynes, graduate in business administration, won the treasurer's post and Jan Bartleson, graduate in English, was re-elected secretary.

The GSC also elected Robert Fancher, graduate in philosophy; John Shields, graduate in forestry; Wayne Stahl, graduate in history; Richard Maye, graduate in political science; and Emery Ackerman, graduate in computer science, to the Graduate Council.

Soliah tells of arrest, love affair with Hearst

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—Patricia Hearst's underground lover, Steven Soliah, testified Thursday how their love affair and plans to flee to Oregon were wrecked when FBI agents arrested the fugitive heiress last September.

Describing how Hearst first touched his heart, Soliah told the jurors in his bank robbery trial: "I felt sorry for her... She seemed kind of confused."

"I lived with her. I slept with her. We had a close relationship. We felt very close to each other."

"We were planning on moving to Oregon." But he added, "On Sept. 18, I was arrested."

Then he told how he heard on a radio that Hearst's fugitive companions, William and Emily Harris, had been apprehended, and how he rushed to Hearst's apartment to late to warn her. "I wanted to make sure that Patty was all right," said Soliah. "But when he got there, he said, 'I was arrested.'"

Hearst, who had been the nation's most-wanted fugitive during the previous year, was already in custody.

Soliah gave the first complete details of Hearst's "missing year" in the radical underground.

He told how she and the Harrises moved easily from house to house—leaving Sacramento in the summer of 1975 for San Francisco where they occupied several different dwellings before settling in the hideouts where they were arrested.

He placed Hearst in Sacramento at the time of a fatal bank robbery but denied that he was involved in it.

The soft-spoken Soliah said he was at the San Francisco apartment of another girlfriend when the robbery occurred.

Weaving an intricate story of love and intrigue, the 27-year-old Soliah told jurors Hearst accepted his help for several months, then inexplicably rebuffed him in mid April 1975—only days before a Sacramento bank robbery in which a woman was killed.

"Patty had asked about me. She wanted to see me," he said of his visit with her in April. But upon arrival, her friends William and Emily Harris, asked him to go buy groceries.

"I thought that was a little strange," he said. "I asked Patty to go with me... and we took a little drive."

"Remember I was asking her how she felt. I said Emily seemed a little strange... But she didn't want to talk about it."

Back at "Patty's place," he said, the Harrises suggested he leave.

"I felt kind of mad and upset. I asked Patty what was going on. She shrugged and said they were just having problems and she thought I should go, too," said Soliah. He was stunned and hurt.

"I felt kind of bummed out about it," he said. Soliah, charged with the April 21, 1975, bank robbery in which a woman was killed by a shotgun blast, explained his relationship with the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) as an offshoot of his sympathy for Hearst. He said he never thought an alliance with the terrorist band would be "crazy."

He met Hearst and the Harrises in June 1974, less than a month after a fiery shootout in which six SLA members died, Soliah said. One slain member was his friend Angela Atwood.

Soliah's sister, Kathy, and her boyfriend, James Kilgore—both currently fugitives—introduced him to the Harrises and Hearst at a Berkeley apartment, said Soliah.

"They came in. They were carrying suitcases and bags," he recalled. "They took weapons out of the bags and propped them against the walls. They walked around looking out the windows of the apartment. They seemed extremely nervous."

He had warned his sister against involvement with the group, he said, but couldn't resist a chance to meet them.

"I was curious," he said. "I just wanted to meet these people to see what they were like."

Hearst has refused at her San Francisco bank robbery trial to talk about the "missing year" as a fugitive in Sacramento, having abandoned a Pennsylvania farmhouse hideout. She was convicted March 20.

Soliah said he met Hearst again in August 1974 when she and the Harrises came from the East Coast to an apartment arranged by Soliah, his sister and Kilgore.

"Patty arrived in a Greyhound bus with Jim Kilgore," he said. "She said the people taking care of them didn't want to take care of them anymore and they were forced to move."

Counselor says state likely to grant scholarship funds

A Student Work and Financial Assistance office counselor said Thursday that the state is likely to appropriate the necessary funds to pay for the Illinois State Scholarship Commission (ISSC) grant program through spring semester.

Geraldine White, ISSC counselor, said, "I'm 99 per cent sure we're going to get full payment." The ISSC requested more money from the Illinois legislature because it allocated more funds to students than it had. ISSC has threatened to reduce grants by 12 per cent unless the legislature approves a $3.9 million supplementary appropriation.

White said that both the House and Senate have passed bills to provide the funds and are conferring to determine the final version to be sent to Gov. Daniel Walker for approval.

Walker has said he supports the supplemental appropriation.

Larry Juhlin, assistant to the vice president for student affairs, said SIU will not charge students for the amount that ISSC does not pay until it sees what happens with the supplementary appropriation.

Man convicted on drug count

A 25-year-old Carbondale man has been convicted by a Perry County jury on a charge of illegal possession of cannabis over 500 grams.

James Richardson, 325 Birch Lane Drive, was arrested Sept. 14 with two other men in Pinckneyville at a roadblock set up by the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group (MEG).

The three men were carrying 300 pounds of marijuana in a camper-topped pickup truck when they were stopped at the roadblock in Pinckneyville's courthouse square, said MEG Director Richard Pariser.

The cache was estimated to have had a street value of about $30,000.

Charges are pending in Jackson County against Richardson on two counts of illegal delivery of cocaine and one count of illegal delivery of heroin.

Richardson will be sentenced May 26 for the conviction in Perry County.

Mysterious killings continue in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Governments come and go but killing remains a constant in Argentine political life. At least 60 bodies bearing signs of assassination by mysterious right-wing death squads have been found in Argentina since the March 24 military coup. It is believed that most of the victims were leftists suspected by their killers of supporting guerrilla operations.

Security forces have reported killing 40 "subversive delinquents" in numerous anti-guerrilla operations since March 24, when armed forces overthrew President Isabel Peron in a bloodless coup. The guerrillas also have shown that their ability to kill is still considerable. Since March 24, left-wing extremists have been blamed for the slayings of more than 25 police officers and private guards, two business executives, a navy captain and several other persons. Most hit-and-run guerrilla attacks were in the city and province of Buenos Aires, where nearly half of Argentina's 25 million people live. This also is where the death squads have been most active.

Bergman leaves Sweden due to harassment

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—Film director Ingmar Bergman, beset by tax problems announced Thursday he could no longer live in Socialist Sweden and was leaving the country to continue his work abroad. The man who almost single-handedly put Sweden on the map as a major movie center said he had been harassed and humiliated by "prestige-ridden poker players" in the tax bureaucracy. He said they tried to blackmail him to save face in a highly publicized tax case.

His departure was expected to touch off an exodus of prominent Swedish artists, including some of the actors he made famous, from the country for better treatment abroad. Among stars who gained fame through Bergman were Bibi Andersson, Max von Sydow and Norwegian Liv Ullmann. Bergman did not say where he would settle, but friends indicated he would choose Italy or France. He has earlier expressed a love for Italy and had plans to work with director Federico Fellini.

CIA Deputy Director Vernon Walters quits

WASHINGTON (AP)—Lt. Gen. Vernon Walters, the Central Intelligence Agency's (CIA) deputy director who defended the agency during recent congressional investigations, is quitting, the White House announced Thursday. CIA associate deputy director E. Henry Knoche, a civilian, will be nominated to replace Walters, the White House said. Walters' resignation came as a surprise, and details surrounding his quitting unfolded piecemeal. The first word came in a single sentence at the bottom of a White House announcement that President Ford planned to nominate Knoche to one of the CIA's No. 2 positions.

The White House did not immediately elaborate. Efforts to reach Walters proved futile. A CIA spokesman said the deputy director was out of town and unavailable for comment. An hour and a half later Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Walters was quitting because he believed himself "overdue to get out of the Army." The deputy director also recognized that Bush would want to pick his own top assistant, Nessen said.

Kissinger criticizes presidential campaigns

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said Thursday presidential election campaigns tend to inhibit major American diplomatic initiatives but that Russia carries the main burden for the deterioration of détente. "It is clear when there are so many candidates in the field there is a temptation to defer dramatic moves" until after the election, he said. Kissinger spoke at a news conference that dealt mainly with U.S.-Soviet relations and the secretary's upcoming trip to Africa.

While acknowledging the impact of the presidential campaign of foreign policy, Kissinger at the same time denied U.S. politics has caused the obvious slowdown in détente. Kissinger said the United States policy toward Russia follows two tracks: to resist Russian aggression while still pursuing efforts to ease tensions and insure world peace. Specifically, the United States still is prepared to negotiate a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty restricting offensive nuclear weapons.

Bomb rips through Boston courthouse

BOSTON (AP)—A dynamite blast rocked a marble-walled corridor of a courthouse Thursday in this racially tense city, injuring 18 persons at exactly the time an anonymous caller had warned a bomb would explode. Police said there was a 10-minute delay in getting word of the call to the workers in the building. The bombing followed three straight days of racial violence, but it was impossible to say immediately whether the bombing was related. Racial unrest has troubled Boston since the start of court-ordered busing for integration.

One man lost a leg when the bomb went off in the elevator lobby outside a second-floor probation office. Sheriff Thomas A. Eisenstadt quoted the caller as saying, "A bomb will go off, Jackson. A bomb will go off, Jackson." The caller said at 8:53 a.m. the bomb would go off in 20 minutes. "It went off in 20 minutes," said John E. Powers, clerk of the state Supreme Court.

Walker indicates support for Howlett

SPRINGFIELD, (AP)—Gov. Daniel Walker appeared Thursday to rule out a third-party run for governor and to indicate that he would at least nominally support the Democratic nominee, Secretary of State Michael Howlett. In a telegram read at the Democratic state convention, Walker said: "I am a Democrat and I believe strongly in the two party system..."

Walker said a schedule conflict prevented his attending the convention, which was called to select at-large delegates to the Democratic national convention in July. After his loss to Howlett in the March 16 Democratic primary, Walker left open the possibility he might not support Howlett and might seek re-election with a third party.

Lebanese president given 10 days to resign

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Leftist Moslems on Thursday threatened to establish a revolutionary government if Christian President Suleiman Franjeh does not step down from office in 10 days. Fighting tapered off in the year-old civil war that has left 16,500 dead and ruined the economy, but there still was sporadic shelling and shooting. Police said 27 persons were killed and 46 wounded throughout the country on Thursday.

Nine of the wounded were hit in St. Joseph's Hospital, in Dora in eastern Beirut, which was blasted by 15 mortar shells. Beirut radio also reported clashes in nearby Nabaa, a Moslem area in eastern Beirut completely encircled by the Christians. Meanwhile, Syrian-equipped troops of the Palestine Liberation Organization consolidated their hold along the so-called green line dividing Christian and Moslem forces in Beirut. Three trucks carrying 35 tons of flour crossed from the Christian area in eastern Beirut to western Beirut, where bread shortages were beginning to develop.

Taylor: World must chart own evolution

By Judy Vandewater
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

We live at a historical crossroads. "The world must henceforth chart its own evolution," said Alastair Taylor, a professor of international affairs and cultural history at Queens University in Canada.

Taylor was one of four Club of Rome members to present "Goals for a Global Society" as part of the three-day seminar, "Bicentennial Horizons: A Club of Rome Symposium on Systems Science and America's Next Hundred Years."

Taylor placed the research in historical perspective and briefly described the human species evolution from paleolithic to contemporary man.

Taylor said the world is in a transition from a stage of nation states to a global society, but emphasized that all nations are not developing at the same pace.

"History has led us to where we are, and we must therefore chart our course to a sustainable and humane future," Taylor said.

"Goals for a Global Society" is a research project sponsored by the Club of Rome and directed by Ervin Laszlo, a member of the club and professor of philosophy at the University of New York at Genesio.

Laszlo described the report, delivered for the first time in Philadelphia last week, as an attempt to identify goals which are common to all nations.

"Today it is a question of foreseeing the kind of society that we want to live in at the turn of the century," he said.

Because of time restrictions, only one-third of the scope of the total report was presented at the session, Laszlo said.

Thomas E. Jones, a member of the club and research coordinator for the "Goals for a Global Society" project, emphasized the importance of establishing worldwide goals "to promote harmonious interaction in our increasingly interdependent world."

Jones pointed out that in the last decade there has been a tremendous increase in the global flow of five basic resources, food, energy, materials, information and money. A "self-centeredness" of nation state interest and corporate state interest makes the resource flow bias to powerful and wealthy nations, Jones said.

Jones delivered a comprehensive outline of global goals which lie in the areas of world security, increasing food production, stabilizing population, securing selective economic growth, charting an equitable pattern of development for developing nations and stabilizing the world's monetary systems.

classes in developing nations have expressed a desire for smaller families, Jones said. He added that there is general acceptance of use of contraceptives throughout the world.

Family planning systems could be undertaken on a worldwide scale at a cost of $2 billion, Jones said.

An earlier report to the Club of Rome had focused on stabilizing development throughout the world and was described as a "zero growth" policy. Jones said nations should work towards "selective political homogeneity. "There is a very great danger in uniformity," he said. "If we look for a single political system adaptable throughout the world, we would be committing a serious fallacy."

Alastair Taylor

"History has led us to where we are, and we must chart our own course"

Jones said that although there is enough food produced today to adequately feed the world, distribution of the food is inequitable. Emphasizing the importance of increasing yield per acre in developing nations, Jones said more efficient storage methods and transportation systems are needed to reduce crop loss in these nations.

Jones said during the next decade the rate of population increase could be cut in half. People of all socio-economic growth powered by at least one source of abundant energy." He added that the rich countries must provide aid and assistance to developing nations.

Laszlo said achieving the "Goals of a Global Society" would necessitate major shifts in technology, values and belief systems. He emphasized that all the goals, "must be pursued cooperatively and simultaneously."

In a brief question and answer period, Laszlo said global goals do not require

S. Illinois population hike predicted

Eric White
Student Writer

Development of coal mining, recreational facilities and agriculture may increase the population of 27 Southern Illinois counties by as much as 250,000 over the next 25 years, said Ray E. Wakely, SIU professor emeritus in sociology.

Speaking at a Thursday afternoon session of the Club of Rome symposium being held at SIU, Wakely described the increase as part of a general reversal of a population decline in rural America. He said rural areas had a population loss of one-million people each year between 1940 and 1960.

Howard H. Olson, SIU professor of agriculture, described the reversal as a flight from the city rather than as a return to the farm.

Olson predicted that despite an increased population, "Southern Illinois will become a significant agricultural area in the future."

He said reclaimed strip mines can be used for growing grasses and legumes for pasturing farm animals.

In order that Southern Illinois resources be properly used, Olson said, land-use mapping, zoning and conservation education are required.

He said the greatest pressures on rural America will be for more food and more space.

Wakely and Olson both stressed the need for population control in bringing resources into balance with consumption. "The task is big enough for any of us and all of us," Wakely said.

James D. Beck, associate professor at the SIU School of Medicine, predicted that in the future, doctors will confine themselves to curing illnesses, while nurses and practitioners will take over much of long term patient care and diagnosis.

This, along with a greater awareness of good health practices on the part of the public, will result in better health everywhere in the United States, Beck said.

SIU police begin contract negotiations

Representatives from the University and Teamsters Local 347 and three SIU Security officers met for less than an hour Thursday in the first day of negotiations of a Security officers' contract.

An officer who attended the meeting said he could not comment on what was discussed in the meeting. He said those involved in the bargaining agreed at the meeting not to discuss the progress of the talks with the news media until a settlement has been reached.

Teamster's representative William Calliss also refused comment beyond saying that a second meeting has not yet been scheduled.

Calliss said when the talks are completed "maybe then you'll get a joint statement from the University and myself" regarding the settlement.

A spokesman for the Security officers said Wednesday that the officers voted to join the Teamsters last August because they were dissatisfied with the conditions and treatment they were subjected to as members of the Security Police.

He said the officers were seeking increases in salary, overtime pay, sick time, insurance coverage and a general improvement in working conditions.

Quake area needs ounce of prevention

By Timothy LeGear
Student Writer

Earthquake research and prevention in California has stagnated due to insufficient funds which inhibit technology, and an attitude held by the residents of the state repressing dangers and refusing to acknowledge even the existence of earthquakes. The most illustrative example is the city running the greatest risk.

San Francisco, affectionately dubbed "everyone's favorite city", suffered an earthquake in 1906 registering 8.25 on the Richter scale that devastated the city; 521 city blocks were destroyed by fire that raged for three days because earth tremors ruptured underground water mains; 1,000 people were killed and property damage totaled $450 million.

Geophysicists deduced that the earthquake was only one in a series that had erupted for millions of years at intervals of approximately 50 years. They now state an earthquake of tremendous proportions threatens the bay area with greater potentiality every passing day.

West Coast earthquakes are caused by pressure trapped between two masses of the earth's crust theoretically wedged together by the continental drift. The result is the San Andreas Fault, a crack in the earth's shell far below the surface extending 300 miles along the California coastline.

Editorial

Major cities such as Oakland, Berkeley, and Daly City surround the faultline, but San Francisco, with a population of 675,000, rests squarely on it, making it the most vulnerable to total destruction.

The cause for concern is that as the span between the quakes increases, so does its potential force, and the eruption is already 20 years overdue.

Despite the seriousness of the danger, bay area inhabitants prefer not to think of earthquakes. Some describe the 1906 disaster as "The Great San Francisco Fire," completely ignoring the cause of the conflagration. Consequently, few earthquake prevention methods have been adhered to.

Most of the financial district, including most of the cities' 900 high-rises, is built on bay fill, one of the least stable building sites available. The international airport and eight hospitals are built directly on fault lines. Neither are expected to endure even minor quakes.

In what may take only 60 to 90 seconds, experts predict about 1.5 million people will watch most buildings crumble; fire and explosions ignite for days; flooding caused by the 19th century dam drowns thousands; thousands more being deprived of food, water or medical supplies for as long as a week; power and communication stations destroyed, rendering useless the disaster relief program. "And without effective communications, you're dead," said Director of Emergency Operations, Ed Joyce.

Despite, forewarnings, not one of 125 San Franciscans interviewed consider earthquakes a major problem. When asked what they would do during a quake, 60 per cent said, "Pray."

Prediction alleviates some of the danger and has been proven successful in Southern California in a 1971 quake. But only $3 million is allotted to the research center annually, which Ed Joyce says merely keeps the door open. And according to U.S. News and World Report magazine, even with the necessary funds, adequate protection would not be available for 10 years.

Another problem with predictions is scientists' inhibitions to declare such a possibility, knowing the cities' industry, economy and workforce would be paralyzed indefinitely even if the alarm was inaccurate.

The best solution seems to be the long term solution. The oil industry has discovered a technique in drilling that can easily be converted for releasing pressure by pumping water into certain points along the fault, manipulating the pressure and channeling it out through pipes, much as oil is brought to the surface. It's the most promising earthquake preventative, according to a Berkeley seismologist, although there is a risk of setting off a destructive quake. It's expected to require at least 20 years for completion. But while blueprints are being designed for such a project, experiments could be exercised in less dangerous regions and scientists may well prevent what most experts feel is the "inevitable" San Francisco earthquake. If national and local governments subsidized the research, thousands of people in San Francisco, and indeed all over the world, may be rescued before the tragedy, rather than after it.

Death needs clear definition

By Mike Kinney
Graduate Student Writer

The twentieth century has been an age of unparalleled technological achievement. During the past few years we have witnessed everything from successful heart transplants to men on the moon.

These scientific advances, while beneficial for the most part, have placed a burden upon our shoulders. It is now necessary to devise a new set of rules to facilitate our living in this age of science.

The Karen Quinlan case served as a slap in the face to those who were willing to accept the modern world but who either neglected or refused to face the problems which go hand in hand with progress. A society in which life can be indefinitely sustained with the aid of machines must accept the responsibility of deciding where life ends and death begins.

Commentary

Recently the New Jersey Supreme Court, in a unanimous decision, ruled that if doctors and a hospital ethics committee agree "that there is no reasonable possibility of Karen's ever emerging from her present comatose condition, the life-support system may be withdrawn without any civil or criminal liability" for anyone involved.

This decision overturned the ruling of New Jersey Superior Court Judge Robert Muir Jr. who refused to allow Karen to "die with dignity." After 11 days of reflection, Judge Muir had said that his decision was guided by both "judicial conscience and morality."

Individual morality, however, cannot be the foundation for legal precedents. In a world where machines sustain life, there is a desperate need for rules and regulations that are just as hard and cold as the metal in the life-giving equipment.

Karen Quinlan is in a prolonged coma. She has suffered severe damage to her brain. In her case, this damage could involve four areas: the reticular formation of the midbrain, which controls arousal and alertness; both halves of the cerebral cortex, which control reasoning and memory; the basal ganglia, which is the motor-control center; and the thalamus, which is the relay center for sensations such as pain, heat and cold. Because damage to nerve cells is irreparable, doctors hold no hope for her recovery.

There were three major legal issues in the case. First, the general question of euthanasia had to be grappled with. Secondly, there was the question of whether or not "active" or "passive" procedures should be used in similar cases. In other words, should everything under the sun be done to prolong life in hopeless cases? Finally, and most importantly, was the question of what standards should be used to define death.

These questions, however, are mixed with human emotion which sometimes interferes with rationality. It has been argued, for example, that if legal guardians are allowed to judge the worth of life, then we will see the "mercy killing" of "retardates, the senile and feeble-minded, new born defectives and severely handicapped."

Such arguments border upon hysteria. Those were the tactics of Nazi Germany, and just as they were not tolerated then, surely they will not be tolerated now. The problem lies in the fact that no one wants to objectively tackle the questions brought out by the Quinlan case. When Judge Muir rendered his decision he said, "It's a medical question, not a judicial one."

Dr. Robert Veatch of the Institute of Society, Ethics and the Life Sciences at Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y., stated that "there's nothing in medical training that qualifies a physician to make these decisions. If any values count, they should be the patient's and family's."

The Quinlan family, claiming that Karen had, upon several occasions, stated that she would not wish to be kept alive by extraneous means, argues that Karen had a "right to die." But the values of the Quinlan family, and perhaps even those of Karen, had been disregarded by the lower court.

Until the New Jersey Supreme Court's ruling, the entire question was bogged down by a judicial system that refused to crack the ice in the area, by a medical profession that refused to take the responsibility for the decision (perhaps because of the recent binge of malpractice suits) and by the rejection of pleas made by a family that showed considerably more courage than anyone else involved.

Because of the New Jersey Supreme Court's ruling, and the hospitals' decision not to appeal, there is now, at the very least, a beginning for a legal precedent to follow when such cases occur, as they inevitably will, in the future.

However, there are problems with the precedent. The phrase "reasonable possibility" of recovery needs some clear-cut definition.

In the very near future there will be a need for uniform standards to determine questions such as "When does death occur?" Death must be concretely defined by the medical profession, and that definition must be upheld and used by the judiciary. Morality and the law must come to grips with today's technology.

Revise tenure

By Cathy Tokarski
Editorial Page Editor

After all the power-brokers in the tenure decision game have said what they think is good and bad about SIU's present policy, some points for improvement have finally become clear.

First, the present four-year time limit for making tenure recommendations for instructors must be extended. By doing this, faculty members will be allowed more time to meet the demands their profession requires, and students and colleagues can make a better judgment of their worth.

Also, students and faculty members must begin to play a bigger role in making tenure decisions. Too often, decisions jump from committee to committee, where recommendations are made without any real knowledge of a faculty member's qualifications or the department's needs. Not nearly enough departmental weight is given to making tenure decisions. Who would know better than the faculty members themselves if a teacher is meeting the department's needs? Frank Horton, or any department chairman, cannot alone judge a teacher's worth.

Letters

The "other" Carbondale

To the Daily Egyptian:

This letter is written in response to Judy Vandewater's series on "The Other Carbondale."

Ms. Vandewater's coverage is typical of the media's insensitivity in reporting news concerning blacks in America. What Ms. Vandewater does is to view Northeast Carbondale from the eyes of one totally unaware of the forces that have given form and character to the community. In other words, she views Northeast Carbondale as many white reporters might—sensationalize the bad and cover the good.

She fails to include the plight of poor whites living in Northeast Carbondale. What about them, Judy? Surely one who attempts to expose "the other" Carbondale should include an objective picture of the entire community.

And what, may we ask, is meant by the "other Carbondale." No wonder the problems prevalent in Northeast Carbondale exist when we have the media and a few others (city officials) viewing the Northeast Side as a community separated from Carbondale. The term "the other" Carbondale, we believe, connotes something forgotten or rejected.

If the Daily Egyptian wants to present an objective view of Carbondale's Northeast Community, send someone sensitive and intuitive enough to grasp a realistic view of Northeast Carbondale: A community striving to overcome poverty, racism, and moral degradation. That's the real picture. Now let's see it captured.

The letter was also signed by nine other citizens of the Northeast Community.

Live and learn

To the Daily Egyptian:

I'm writing this letter to express my dissatisfaction with an area merchant, namely Lowell's, which is located on South Illinois Avenue.

Recently, I purchased film and other supplies at this establishment. At the same time of purchase, I specifically stated the "exact" type of film I wanted. After leaving the store, I opened the sack and found the clerk had given me the wrong type of film.

Within two hours, I returned to the store expecting a quick exchange and a courteous apology for the inconvenience. To my surprise, I was told "We don't give refunds or exchanges for photo sensitive material." After simply explaining that a mistake had been made and that the mistake was on the part of the sales clerk, I was again told that no refund or exchange would be given.

Well, needless to say, I was upset because I had to absorb the cost of the mistake, not on my part but on that of the sales clerk. $3.50 may not be much money to some people, but to me there have been times when even this little sum was the difference between eating or not.

Thankfully, Carbondale has more than one merchant that deals in photo supplies to whom I can patronize. It is Lowell's that I can thank for showing me that less expensive alternatives do exist. Live and learn.

J. B. Cain
Senior
Design

Editor's note: Russ Craighead, camera materials manager at Lowell's said the store does not exchange photo sensitive materials because they can be destroyed once taken out of the store. He said this policy was developed in order to protect photographers buying materials from the store.

Pornography game

To the Daily Egyptian:

Mr. Cohen's commentary on "Pornography" in the April 17 edition of the Daily Egyptian unfortunately reveals his own deception in the recognition of truth from falsehood. Playing the pornography game is more dangerous than playing Russian roulette, for in this case all the chambers are loaded. Therefore, it is hardly any innocent escapism. It is entering Satan's lair of lust. If you don't think you are his captive, just try to walk away and leave the places and things that will capture your lustful imagination. Ask your nearest gay liberator to try it. Suddenly you find how hooked you are. Then where is the escape?

Simply because men call the sin of lust under the label of personal rights or freedom, it does not change its nature. God still calls it bondage. Men call sin a fascination. God calls it abomination. Men call sin a chance. God calls it a choice. Men call sin acceptable if under the law. God calls it blasphemy. (To blaspheme means to insult something sacred.)

Satan would have us take beauty and goodness and throw it on the trash heap and wallow in it. Therefore, just because the pornography promoters would have you believe that a dip in your closest sewage sludge pit is a good deal, don't believe them. No one can leave without contamination, and some will die in the midst of it if they inhale too deeply.

Liberals an endangered species

By Arthur Hoppe

Legislation has been introduced in Congress to declare the Liberal an endangered species.

Testimony before the House Subcommittee on Wildlife and Other Forms of Recreation indicated that the Liberal, which once roamed America in vast herds, may soon go the way of the carrier pigeon, the whooping otter and the slack-jawed anteater.

Dr. Homer T. Pettibone told the Congressmen that he and his fellow naturalists had been able to discover only a few remaining colonies of Liberals in such widely scattered areas as Beverly Hills, Washington's Georgetown and New York's upper West Side.

He said the Liberal is basically a nocturnal creature which lives on hors d'oeuvres. He said those specimens that survive appear to be suffering from malnutrition due to the drastic dwindling of their food supply.

Dr. Pettibone blamed the dramatic decline of the Liberal population on three factors: (1) overhunting by pundits; (2) political climatological changes; and (3) the Liberal's own inherent physical and psychological defects, including a lemming-like death wish.

"The Liberal was certainly behind the door when survival characteristics were passed out," said Dr. Pettibone. "Take a Liberal's heart. It bleeds."

As a result, he said, bleeding-heart Liberals are

Alcoholism in industry to be topic of program

Two experts on alcoholism and its effect on industry will highlight a one-day conference May 5 in the SIU Student Center.

Ed L. Johnson of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company of Akron, Ohio, and Tom Snover, a representative of the United Auto Workers in Detroit, Mich., will be among the speakers at the conference, which is open to all area business, governmental and educational personnel.

The program is aimed at developing a greater awareness of alcoholism in industry, as well as providing an overview of alcohol-related problems and how they are viewed and dealt with by large corporations, smaller companies, labor unions and state agencies.

Johnson, manager of the Employee Assistance Program at Firestone, is a member of the board of directors of the Ohio Association of Alcoholism Programs and the Greater Akron Area Council on Alcoholism, and serves on the Ohio Governor's Alcoholism Advisory Board. He is also a former consultant to the National Council on Alcoholism.

The conference is sponsored by the Alcoholism Resource Center of Carbondale, the Jackson County Community Mental Health Center and the SIU Rehabilitation Institute and Division of Continuing Education.

Deadline for registration is May 3. Cost is $20, including materials, luncheon and coffee. For registration information, persons may contact Lexell D. Hall at the Division of Continuing Education.

"The Tempest," Shakespeare's romantic comedy, will be played by the New Shakespeare Company at 8 p.m. Friday in Shryock Auditorium. Three members of the cast, Michael Straws, George Crowley and Jeff Shoemaker, act out part of the play. The show is free and open to the public. Convocations Series and the SGAC Cultural Affairs are sponsors of the show.

Carroll's 'Alice' to open

Lewis Carroll's classic, "Alice Through the Looking Glass," will be presented by the speech department at 8 p.m. April 29 and 30; 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. May 1; and 2 p.m. May 2 on the Calipre Stage, second floor, Communications Building.

The story will be staged as written by Carroll in the form of a giant chess game, said Lynn Bradley, guest director of the show. Bradley is a former speech department faculty member now teaching at Giant City School.

She said she picked the story because "of its appeal to all age groups. Many references are made, in this particular Carroll book, in our daily lives—phrases such as 'Tweedledum and Tweedledee,' 'Jabberwock' and 'The Walrus and the Carpenter' are constantly popping up in newspapers, advertising and political cartoons."

The cast for the show includes Lawrence Dennis, associate professor for educational administration and foundations, as Lewis Carroll and the White Knight; Carolyn Bittner, a graduate assistant in liberal arts and sciences advisement, as the White Queen; Leigh Craine, a graduate student, as the Red Queen and Winston Throgmorton III, a junior in political science, as the Red King and White King.

Alice will be portrayed by Karrie Rochman, a Giant City School sixth grader. The nursery rhyme characters will be played by Justin and Oliver Dennis, Lincoln Junior High eighth graders. The pawns, Andy Sisulak, Matt, Julie and Ann Deichmann, and Sarah and Pat McVerney, are Giant City School students.

Bradley explained that she cast children in the show because "it has always been my firm belief that good children's theater includes children in appropriate age roles."

Folk comedy to run in Lab Theater

The final performance of "A Little Holy Water" will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Laboratory Theater, Communications Building.

The production, a folk comedy about Cuban-American cigar workers during the Great Depression of the 1930s, is written by Ramon Delgado, a graduate student in theater. It is part of his Ph.D. dissertation.

Director for the full-length play is Eric Pourchot, a senior in theater. Cast members include Dianne Frantell, a sophomore in elementary education; David Jacks, a senior in cinema and photography; Greg Graves, a junior in theater; Kevin Killebrew, a sophomore in theater; Michael Sgroi, a graduate student in theater; Ina Burko, a graduate student in theater; Zoanne

Nutt, a graduate student in theater; Robert Beam, a junior in theater; Susan Estabrook, a sophomore in cinema and photography and Cherie Koch, a junior in theater.

The production is sponsored by Playwright's Workshop 511 theater class under the direction of Christian Moe, professor in theater. Following the presentation of "A Little Holy Water," an open discussion with Delgado, Pourchot and cast members is planned for the audience.

The play is free and open to the public.

Delgado has won awards for his plays in eight national play contests. Seven of his plays have been published including "Waiting for the Bus" and "Once Below a Lighthouse."

Twilight Show at 6:00/$1.25

Richard Archer, instructor of design, and his crew of student workers, take a break from working on one of the five show trailers in a caravan that will tour the Southern Illinois area leaving Saturday from SIU. The trailers will bring arts, crafts and shows to area towns.

Art show wagon hits the road bringing crafts, shows to area

A modern-day equivalent of the medieval caravan of arts and crafts will be hitched up Saturday at SIU to start a venture designed to bring the arts into everyday life in the region.

The caravan will include five trailers: a show wagon for productions of a play based on Southern Illinois folklore, and four other trailers for demonstrations to such crafts as glass blowing, pottery, weaving and metal smithing. First stop of the caravan will be the square in Marion on Saturday. It will be followed by 14 other stops throughout southern counties.

The project is part of the Southern Illinois Art Resources Cooperative, made possible by grants totalling about $50,000 from the SIU President's Academic Excellence Fund and from federal manpower program sources.

Project Director George J. Mavigliano, assistant professor of art at SIU, said the idea behind the caravan is to "try to make the communities understand how art can be a part of their everyday lives."

The caravan hopes to build its audiences from people such as prisoners and elderly persons, who are physically unable to get to cultural events, and from others who, because of ethnic or cultural influences, don't see a place for art in their lives.

"Crafts will be used to attract a person who isn't interested in the arts," Mavigliano said. "A man who has worked on a farm all his life can relate to a blacksmith. The thing that he's making may be a weathervane or something like it and still have the fine quality of a work of art."

Performing arts will also be related to everyday life. Mavigliano said. "We're not going to be bringing in Shakespeare or the ballet, at least not for awhile."

The play chosen for the first tour is "Moon Shadows: Lore and Legend," written by Judy Dickinson, a graduate student in oral interpretation of literature at SIU. Dickinson said the play is a collection of tales based on Southern Illinois folklore. Six or seven storytellers will spin their yarns, some funny, some scary, from the region's past.

One tale is based on stories about strange sights on Dug Hill near Ware, including a phantom wagon driver with glowing eyes.

Finishing touches are being put on the show trailer by students working under the direction of design instructor Richard Archer. The portable stage and other vehicles were financed with a $25,000 grant from the President's Academic Excellence Fund.

"What's of more concern to us," said Mavigliano, "is the cost of operating the vehicles." He estimated that the cost of operating the vehicles for a weekend would amount to about $1000.

Because of the expense, Mavigliano said many of the telephone and mail requests for caravan bookings had to be turned down. He said that some of the requests came from outside the state and from as far north as Chicago.

Mavigliano said that some communities have agreed to pay some of the caravan's expenses, up to 15 cents a mile for each of the five vehicles. Other communities that could not afford this minimal cost are getting the caravan free.

"The real test of the concept of bringing the arts to the region via caravan will come next year when the communities will have to contribute something," Mavigliano said. "We're hoping the response will still be positive." Mavigliano's goal is to stimulate interest in the arts so that permanent art centers will develop in the communities to be served by the caravan.

Other stops for the caravan will be: SIU, Anthony Hall, April 26-28; Carmi, May 1-2; Vienna State Prison, May 8-9; Broughton, June 19-20; Galatia, June 26-27; Flora, July 2-5; Bluford, July 10-11; DuQuoin, July 12-24; Cairo, July 24-25; Ridgway, Sept. 11; Murphysboro, Sept. 16-18; DuQuoin, Oct. 1-3; Marion Federal Prison, Oct. 9 and Menard State Prison, Oct. 23.

Bloomington boys choir to present clinic, concert

The "Singing Y'ers," a boys choir from Bloomington, Illinois, will present a 3 p.m. clinic and 8 p.m. concert Friday at the Lutheran Center Chapel, 700 S. University Ave. The group is sponsored by the Bloomington-Normal YMCA.

The clinic will include demonstrations of the choir members voices and questions from the audience. In charge of the clinic is the choir director Henry Charles, chairman of the voice department at Illinois Wesleyan School of Music.

The concert, also under the direction of Charles, will feature serious classical music and lighter operetta music. Both events are free and open to the public.

The group is sponsored by the SIU Chorale and the SIU School of Music.

'Winter Wind' to be shown

"Winter Wind," a 1970 film by Hungarian director Miklos Jansco, will be shown at 8 and 10 p.m. Sunday in the Student Center Auditorium. The film is part of the Expanded Cinema Group's Sunday night Series.

Jansco is one of Eastern Europe's most celebrated directors. In "Winter Wind" he combines the folk culture of Hungary with Marxist philosophy and breath-taking camera shots and movements.

Admission to the film is a $1 donation, but film-goers can enter for 75 cents by presenting a coupon worth 25 cents. The coupon appeared in an Expanded Cinema Group advertisement in the January 30 Daily Egyptian issue.

Student Senate approves student parking resolution

The Student Senate passed two resolutions Wednesday calling for an increase in space for student parking at the University and recommending the installation of an elevator at the Health Service.

The parking resolution recommended buying private property located next to the Home Economics Building on the corner of Illinois Avenue and Mill Street and converting the land into a parking lot.

The resolution also recommended converting parking lot 13 located next to McAndrew Stadium, into a double deck garage.

The resolution also recommended expanding lots 57, 90 and 19, located behind the Communications Building.

The elevator resolution recommended that the administration and SIU Board of Trustees allocate no more than $100,000 from the Student Welfare and Recreation Fund (SWRF) for the construction of a Health Service elevator.

The resolution also recommended that a committee of two graduate students, two undergraduate students, Sam McVay, administrative director of the Health Service; and Harvey Welch, dean of student life, be formed to recommend the type and cost of the elevator.

The senate also requested that Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, give a detailed financial statement of the SWRF account.

In other action, the senate voted to allocate $200 to the Social Welfare Club to cover office expenses.

Law students to observe Law Day with school visits, awards dinner

Students in the SIU School of Law, in conjunction with the Jackson County Bar Association, will observe Law Day April 28 to 30.

Phillip Lenzini, senior in law and a member of the program committee for Law Day, said, "Law Day is a chance for the legal community to reintroduce itself to the public. It is an attempt to pass information to the public concerning legal activities."

"Nationally, like with everything else, it (Law Day) is caught up in the Bicentennial theme. This year's national theme is "200 Years of Liberty and Law," Lenzini said.

National Law Day is set for May 1.

But, because of the law school finals schedule, SIU will observe the day on April 28, 29 and 30 he said.

As part of this year's program, law students, accompanied by 12 local attorneys, will visit eight high schools and junior high schools in Jackson County and present programs to government and civics classes, Lenzini said.

"Thirty-five law students have been assigned as teachers to go into the schools to present the materials," he said. "The program is centered around juvenile problems, such as curfew, drug and alcohol violations and search and seizure."

"We will inform the students on the juvenile justice system, give them hints on finding lawyers and discuss legal issues," he said.

Lenzini said this is the third year the law school has conducted the program. "We pick a new topic each year to keep the students interested," he said.

In addition to the school visits, the School of Law will hold its third annual Law Day Banquet April 28. The speaker will be Justin Stanley, president-elect of the American Bar Association.

The dinner will be held in the Student Center Ballrooms at 7 p.m. Tickets are $5 each. An awards ceremony is also scheduled as part of the program.

A GOLF REVERSAL

WASHINGTON (AP)—The PGA Tournament Players Division apologized to newspapers in February after it had mailed a cartoon in connection with the 1976 TPC.

The cartoon had fine likenesses of Jack Nicklaus and Al Geiberger but the type lines under the golfers had been reversed; Nicklaus won the TPC in 1974 at Atlanta while Geiberger took the 1975 event at Colonial in Texas.

State enacts law regulating government bureaucracies

DENVER, (AP)—Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm Thursday signed the nation's first law designed to force governmental bureaucracies out of business unless they can prove they're needed.

The citizens' lobby Colorado Common Cause proposed the so-called Sunset Law six months ago to control the state version of supergovernment: a system of regulatory agencies and programs that Common Cause feels has exceeded its statutory authority.

The law's concept is not complicated.

Proficiency exams slated for secretarial courses

Proficiency tests in secretarial and office specialties courses will be given from 2 to 5 p.m. May 3 and 4 in General Classrooms 13 and 17.

On May 3, tests will be given for SCR 101 A.B.C.D. typewriting and SCR 102 A.B.C.D. Gregg Shorthand.

Tests to be given the following day include SCR 101 A.B.C.D. typewriting; SCR 103 A.B.C.D. machine shorthand; SCR 106, reprographics (duplicating); SCR 107, filing; and SCR 109, calculating machines.

Outlines of the content of each proficiency exam are available upon request at Woody Hall Room C-318 and the Learning Center in Room 13 of the General Classrooms Building.

Students wishing to take the exam must bring paper, carbon paper and CUSTOMSMEN.

PRAGUE (AP)—Czech customs claim the presents West German tourists carry across the frontiers are a sure indicator of the economic situation in their country, and that what the Czechs try to bring in reflects the latest craze.

It gives an agency or program a life of six years. Within that period, the legislature must call in directors or supervisors to justify the agency's or program's continuance.

If the legislators are satisfied, the program or agency will continue for another six years; during which the process will be repeated. If witnesses can't justify themselves, they will be given a year to complete their business, with no reduction in their authority.

Auto Club to hold road rally Sunday

The Grand Touring Auto Club's annual Ides of March road rally "The Great Shawnee Massacre" will begin Sunday at the SIU Arena. Registration will be held from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

The rally will cover 200 miles of road through the Shawnee National Forest and other areas. A driver's meeting will be held at 9:30. The first driver is scheduled to leave the arena at 10 a.m. Twenty to 30 cars are expected to be entered.

Among boards to be reviewed are those licensing and regulating barbers, cosmetologists and shorthand reporters. They come up for review on July 1, 1977.

"There is a whole history of agencies set up for the best purposes, but in fact they sometimes don't work for the best purposes," Lamm, a Democrat, said in signing the bill.

"I'm not so sure that any of these affected Colorado agencies are in that category, but they all can benefit from this review process."

Other states and the federal government are examining the concept.

On the federal level, Sens. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and John H. Glenn, Jr., D-Ohio, have teamed with Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., to support the "Government Economy and Spending Reform Act of 1976."

That would place most federal programs on a four-year life plan.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., recently introduced a similar bill. A team of other U.S. senators and representatives has drafted a bill calling for a mandatory review of specified "areas" of federal regulation and termination of regulation.

The Sunset measure approved by the Colorado Legislature was introduced in January by Rep. Gerald Kopel, D-Denver, after a presentation by Common Cause during the 1975 summer interim period. It cleared the House Judiciary Committee the next day, was approved by the House on Feb. 4 and sped through the Republican-controlled Senate on March 31.

Students probe old house for architectural history

By Kathleen Takemoto
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

While most students are spending their hours this week basking in the warm spring weather, 10 students enrolled in a President's Scholars' course are spending their afternoons shoveling dirt.

The students are participating in an architectural dig at the site of a burned house at 204 E. Oak St. as part of the course "The Architectural History of Southern Illinois."

The house, which was burned down over a month ago, dates from about the early 1870's said Susan Vogel, co-instructor of the course. Vogel said the house was probably built about 20 years after Carbondale was founded, making it one of the earliest homes in the city. She said that a house across the street from the dig site was built around 1862.

Vogel said that Elbert Simon, owner of the burned house, gave the class permission to conduct the dig and is very interested in the history of the building.

She said the students are digging the bottom of the building's brick foundation to see how it was put together. The University Museum, which provided the equipment for the dig, is also interested in finding out what kinds of bricks were used in early Carbondale houses. The bricks-used in building this house appear to be light, soft and unfired. Bits of pottery and glass, which have been found in the digging, will be taken to the University Museum for possible study, Vogel said.

Some of the students involved in the dig are anthropology majors, but many of the participants have never had any experience in a dig before, she said. The dig began Wednesday afternoon and will continue through Friday.

Vogel said the class is presently doing an inventory of historic buildings in Carbondale. The area between Oakland and Wall Streets and between Willow and Mill Streets has been picked for the study, she said.

The ages of specific buildings are determined through deed and tax records, Vogel said. The class has also been reading old Carbondale newspapers for information about buildings.

The tradition was established by Joseph Ohrbeck, who began flying in 1917, joined an airline in 1929 and flew commercially for 31 years. His son, Richard, also became a pilot and joined the same airline as his father at the age of 19. He has been flying for 33 years.

Recently, David, the youngest of Richard's five children, made his first solo flight on his 16th birthday.

N.Y. prof to talk at SIU about 'new localism'

A former U.S. Urban Renewal administrator and professor of urban affairs will be the keynote speaker in a Community Development Services colloquium at SIU Monday.

Hans B. Spiegel, director of the graduate program in urban affairs at Hunter College, City University of New York, will speak on "The New Localism," at 7:30 p.m. in the Home Economics Lounge.

New localism is an effort by community development specialists to involve more community members in the decision-making process in their cities, according to Paul S. Denise, SIU community development services chairman. An offspring of revenue sharing, the localism concept promotes citizen involvement in channeling revenue sharing funds to develop new service programs as well as continue standard local improvement campaigns.

The talk is open to concerned citizens as well as professionals in planning, development and social services, Denise said.

Spiegel's talk is part of a two-day workshop which includes seminars on future and experimental communities. Frank Horton, SIU vice president for academic affairs and research, will speak during the workshop.

Spiegel is also involved in the Seminar Discussions at 1:00 p.m., Monday CD 202: Future Communities' and at 11:00 a.m., Tuesday, CD 201: Experimental Communities.

Spiegel is probably best known in the field of Urban Affairs with his three volume series, "Citizen Participation in Urban Development."

Tunnels wired to air commercials

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—Everyone knows car radios go silent in long tunnels. If that silence was golden to you, you're in for a disappointment in Florida, where a company has wired a tunnel to broadcast commercials to any radio that's turned on.

J. Rodger Skinner, a former advertising salesman, is betting that most people would prefer to hear anything—even commercials and public service announcements—rather than silence while motoring through tunnels.

"I was driving through the New River Tunnel in Fort Lauderdale one day with my radio on," Skinner said. "It was dead space. I didn't hear anything."

The silence spoke to his broadcasting instincts. Fill the void and sell it, he thought. "It hit me. When a motorist drives through the tunnel, he'd rather hear anything than dead space," Skinner said.

Beginning Friday, an antenna over each of the tunnel's four lanes will broadcast continuously over the entire AM radio band—the only way to avoid it will be to turn off the radio. An experiment Tuesday over one lane was successful.

Each of the individual 10-second advertising or public service messages is repeated 90 times before the next message begins. The repetition is designed to ensure that a motorist will hear all of a message before leaving the tunnel, which is about two blocks long.

Skinner struggled for a year before winning a contract with the state Department of Transportation and permission from the Federal Communications Commission to establish the mini station. Under the three-year pact, his firm pays the state $510 a month for the right to broadcast commercials in the tunnel.

Secretaries 'type' careers as petty office procedure

CHICAGO (AP)—A legal secretary balances checkbooks for her boss and his wife prepares their Christmas mailing. A different employer asks his secretary to sew missing buttons on his suitcoat, and occasionally calls her in Saturdays to type personal letters.

A secretary at a bank complains that she must shop and prepare lunch for her employer, on a special diet. Another has a boss who insists she position the small end of a paper clip on the front side of the paper.

These accounts were some of the "pettiest office procedures" that downtown Chicago secretaries described Wednesday at a celebration of National Secretaries Week sponsored by Women Employed (WE), a local organization of working women.

"These are real, legitimate problems," said Patti Eaken, 41, a legal secretary for 20 years. "I was indoctrinated to do all the menial, petty jobs and I was lucky if I got flowers on National Secretaries Day in return."

She said she now works for a downtown firm where "I'm slowly making inroads. My bosses have taken so many things for granted. But it's changing." Diane Vallenta, an officer of WE, told 200 secretaries at the gathering. "We're here because we work. But our bosses seem to think we work for pin money; that we live at a home where somebody else pays the rent and we sew our own clothes."

The fact that 40 per cent of working women are heads of households "proves that we are not just working for pin money," she said. "We're the ones who really keep those offices going."

Doris Stiglitz, who has been a secretary more than 30 years, described herself as "reasonably intelligent. But I've had bosses who treated me as subhuman. I wasn't able to sue for my abilities. There was no chance for promotion."

She said she formerly worked for "one of the most prestigious law firms in the city where many young girls were treated as something between a prostitute and a secretary. They were more or less blackmailed that way if they wanted to keep their jobs."

The women swapped their "pettiest" experiences, some bordering on the absurd. One secretary told of an employer claiming that he got to know his female workers better by bugging their telephones.

The most common gripes, though, were the little tasks—being expected to perk the morning coffee, scrub the pot and wash the cups, water the plants, run errands and tidy up the office. "These things add up and take up a lot of valuable time, especially if you are getting decent pay like I am," said a secretary for an insurance company.

The central theme of the celebration was set forth in a Secretaries Bill of Rights, including rights to equitable salaries, clear job descriptions and reasonable workloads, opportunity to develop potential and recognition as professionals and individuals.

Many of the women good-naturedly admitted their bosses gave them flowers or took them to lunch Wednesday for National Secretaries Day, although one declared, "My boss gave me money and told me to take myself to lunch."

It's just a matter of mind, claims hypnotist priest

By Edgar Tate
Student Writer

What do Svengali, Pat O'Brien and Jack Frerker have in common?

Svengali was a hypnotist, Pat O'Brien played a Catholic priest in movies and Jack Frerker is both. "People don't treat me differently, because I'm a 'hypnotizing priest', said Father Frerker with a smile.

Beatles return to life as record sales climb

LONDON (AP)—Judging from their current record sales it would appear the Beatles are back together. Although they disbanded six years ago, 23 records by the British singing group are currently among Britain's top selling 100 singles—something they were hard put to do when they were the kings of rock 'n' roll.

They have four hits among the top 30 best sellers—'Yesterday,' recorded seven years ago; 'Hey Jude,' a smash in 1968; 'Paperback Writer,' a 1966 chart-topper, and 'Get Back,' one of their last big hits.

Music industry people reckon the highest-placed of the rereleased records, 'Yesterday,' currently at No. 10 on the charts, could soon make it to the top of the hit parade.

The reason for this remarkable resurgence of Beatlemania among a record-buying generation that missed the group's golden era between 1964 and 1969 is a masterful marketing stroke by the Beatles' old recording company, EMI.

"We'd been looking for a way to represent the Beatles and it seemed a good idea to promote their old singles," said Bob Mercer, EMI's marketing director.

The key was a flood of requests from Beatles fans for EMI to release one of the group's most famous songs, 'Yesterday,' as a single. The song had been released only on an album.

The success of the new wave of Beatlemania is testimony, music business commentators said, to the unique sound and style the lads from Liverpool produced.

This puts the Beatles up there with perennials like Sinatra, Elvis Presley, Crosby and the others of an older generation," one envious record company executive commented. "They'll go on forever."

WIDB concert will feature David Bowie

David Bowie, the King of Glitter, helps celebrate the beginning of The King Biscuit Flower Hour's fourth year Sunday at 10 p.m. on WIDB Radio.

In a special 90-minute concert, Bowie will perform such hits as "Golden Years" from his current best-selling album, "Station To Station," as well as his early and middle classics. The concert was taped live at the Nassau Coliseum during Bowie's recent American tour.

"Fame," his hit single of last year which was coauthored with John Lennon, was a Gold Record and "Station To Station" is his fifth Gold Album.

The King Biscuit Flower Hour has featured every major rock act in the world since it's beginning in 1973, including three shows with The Rolling Stones and two with The Who.

"Anybody can hypnotize someone else if they are properly trained. It's not that tricky a deal."

A member of the Belleville, Ill., arch-diocese and now working at the Newman Center, Father Frerker has been hypnotizing people for 12 years.

People who want to quit smoking, lose weight, develop better study habits or just relax are Father Frerker's usual clients.

"Hypnotism is concentration. Take it literally. Any form of concentration is self-hypnosis," said Frerker. "For example, you get so engrossed in watching a television show that you can't hear people calling you."

Frerker blames the mass media for the negative way in which hypnotism is portrayed.

"It's looked upon as a gimmick, a trick, and it's not all those things," Frerker said. "It's a function of your mind."

The Roman Catholic Church agrees with that concept now, but when the Jesuit priest who trained Frerker started, things were different. The church was more conservative then, he said.

"It would be as ridiculous to outlaw hypnosis as it would be to outlaw thinking," said Frerker.

However, Frerker does warn prospective subjects about what hypnosis is and what it isn't.

"A hypnotist is like a teacher," Frerker said. "He doesn't teach you, he helps you to develop what you already have."

Frerker said more and more doctors and dentists are using hypnotism in their everyday practice.

"Gynecologists are using hypnosis in natural child births to relax and modulate the mothers' breathing," Frerker said.

"The energy crisis of two years ago seems to have gone away. Gasoline prices are declining and there is no harmful shortage of any fuel. That crisis, to which the woes of the airline industry if not the entire recent recession have been attributed, was not a real crisis," Cook said.

"Present relief obscures a hidden crisis that is real: the necessity of replacing a national energy system based on oil and gas by another system adequate in supply, reasonable in cost and secure from catastrophic interdiction," Cook said.

Professor dispels rape myths

By Kathy Drew
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

One of several misconceptions about rape is that people involved with rape prevention were at one time raped or were rapists, said Stanley Brodsky, associate professor of psychology at the University of Alabama.

Brodsky tagged this misconception as the "fearing, lurking" syndrome, a phenomenon resulting from a misunderstanding of rape. He spoke to a small group Wednesday night at Morris Library Auditorium on rape prevention, as part of a four-day rape program entitled "Without Consent—Coping with Rape." His visit was sponsored by Student Government, Graduate Student Council, Feminist Action Coalition and Student Activity fees.

Brodsky, co-author of "Sexual Assault—the Victim and the Rapist," outlined four situations which people think are responsible for rape. First there is the "victim blame model," which states the victim has done something to warrant the rape. Brodsky said this results from the "just world" hypothesis that "people get what they deserve." The "offender blame model" assumes that it is in the nature of the assaulter to be a rapist. Brodsky said.

Brodsky said the "situation blame model" attributes the rape to dark alleys, drunkenness or a situation that sets it off. The "societal blame model," Brodsky said, includes such ideas as machismo motives, attitudes toward women, and the media saying women enjoy rape. Brodsky said he found this model supported in some of the results of his studies on rape.

In a study Brodsky did in 1974, he found that people's definitions of rape depended more on their moral outlook toward rape than the actuality of it.

Brodsky said many typical solutions have been offered in rape prevention, but not many radical solutions. He pointed out several radical solutions that are feasible, though they may have unpredictable repercussions. A radical solution he offered was a mass media experiment in a small town where messages such as "Rape is Impotent" or "for those who don't know the definition of impotent," "Rape is for sissies," were telecast. He added that it is feasible to have an emergency calling device, comparable to a fire call box, to alert police of any kind of assault.

"Rapes can be prevented and are," Brodsky said. He used 37 convicted offenders in his study on rape prevention. He said he became interested in the use of verbal interaction when he heard of the number of rapes that had been deterred by something the woman had said to her attacker.

After gathering information from the rapists on the conversations that occurred, he placed the women's conversations into nine categories. The woman expressing some type of body weakness was the most effective in rape prevention, Brodsky said. "I'll kill myself," and verbal attacks are other effective deterrents.

"The majority of the rapists committed one or two rapes," Brodsky said, though there are cases he knows of where men committed 100 rapes in the same place. He said in some cases men are aroused by the resistance of women. "Coercion was an actual turn-on," he added. But he noted that they are most likely to be deterred by the verbal expressions of an aggressive woman.

Brodsky noted the involvement through funding by the National Institute of Mental Health as being a significant sign of a great concern over the issue. Developing social skills to get men to have healthy interaction with women was another means of therapy that Brodsky cited.

Alaska cries 'wolf' but no takers answer

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP)—For the past year, the State of Alaska has had a standing offer: take a wolf off our hands. No takers.

So in a move that has outraged people living in states where the wolf is virtually extinct, government biologists are shooting the animals from airplanes and helicopters.

The wolf body count since mid-February: about 85. Each one has cost about $1,000 to track down and kill. The state hopes to kill 200 or about 2 per cent of the state's wolf population.

"This offer still stands," says Gov. Jay Hammond, himself a retired wolf hunter. "We would rather export wolves than kill them."

"However, this takes money and willing recipients. Both, to date, have been in short supply."

Hammond says the wolf packs must be thinned. Biologists say the animals are gobbling up too many moose and caribou and have developed a taste for pet dogs.

Environmentalists who tried to stop the killing say wolves are getting a bum rap.

Alaskan officials were serious when they asked if other people would like to have a wolf.

The University of Nevada at Las Vegas—whose sports teams are "The Wolfpack"—asked for one as a mascot. They were turned down because the animals must go to a wilderness or semiwilderness area. Another stipulation: all costs of catching and transplanting the wolf must be borne by the out-of-stater. This could easily reach several thousand dollars.

Folks in the 49 other states, most of which haven't had a wild wolf in 70 years, have been "noticeably uninterested" in the transplant offer, says Ed Huizer, deputy commissioner of fish and game.

Says a veteran Washington state backpacker: "Seeding the forest with wolf cubs might seem like a nice idea to an armchair conservationist."

"But I'd like to see his face when he peaks his head out of a tent one morning in the Cascades and finds a hungry wolf prowling around outside."

Alaska is the last bastion for the wolf. There are estimated to be 8,000 to 12,000, about the same number of a half century ago.

Wolves have been huffed as a predator and game animal for decades in Alaska.

The federal government first placed a bounty on the Alaska wolf's head in 1915, then launched a statewide 10-year predator control effort against the wolf in 1948. Traps, poison and aerial shooters—one of whom was Hammond—were used.

The governor figures he took about 250 wolves in eight years. He flew a single-engine plane with one hand and shot with the other.

Students discover the world— UNDERGROUND

Caver Mark Oliver (right) of the Little Egypt Grotto discusses rock features found in a room with Tim Selg, junior in occupational education and Rick Glas, junior in anthropology.

The quest for a good grade has effected the life of many students at SIU. For more than 140 earth science students, the chance to get 10 extra credit points proved to be an experience not soon to be forgotten. They participated last Saturday in a geology department field trip to two caves located south of Carbondale.

The group arrived with visions of big commercial caverns in their minds but their ideas were revised as they approached the narrow opening to the privately owned cave. Leading the individual student groups were members of the Little Egypt Student Grotto (caving club) and teaching assistants from the geology department. Ken Krivanek of the grotto was instrumental in organizing and planning this semester's outing.

Upon squeezing through the cave entrance the students relied on their flashlights to lead them into the cave's interior. Once deep inside they discovered the mysteries below the top soil. The most prominent feature of the caves was usually met with a shriek—the brown bat. Other features such as white chameleons, cave crickets and rock formations also caught the student's attention.

After venturing through the little cave, the easiest one, the groups were led into the big cave. The going got rough as the students were forced to their hands and knees to crawl through the major portion of the cave. Once at the heart, they shut off all the lights and experienced the world of darkness. They then proceeded out of the cave, still on their hands and knees, to return to the world of light.

Most of the participants agreed afterwards that if they knew before hand what they would have to go through, they probably wouldn't have bothered earning their 10 extra points. But they readily added after coming out that they would return again if the opportunity presented itself.

Teaching assistant Ed Wade finds getting through the entrance to the cave a bit tight.

Daryl Littlefield

One of the natural inhabitants of a cave is the brown bat. The bats are harmless to visitors unless provoked.

Narrow passages are a way of life for a caver. Most students found the tight hallways a little less than desirable. Passages such as this were a major part of the route through the cave.

Italy hopes tourism grows to end her financial woes

ROME (AP)—"Whip inflation. Visit Italy this year," could be the slogan on a travel poster beckoning foreigners to this sunny land.

The troubled economy and a weak currency may be woe to Italians, but they've turned Italy into a relative paradise for tourists. Officials are hoping for a record number of visitors.

Tourists, who began pouring into Italy before Easter, are finding that their dollars and other strong foreign currencies will buy as much this year as last, and sometimes more despite a 30 per cent annual inflation rate here.

That's because the Italian lira has declined on foreign exchange markets at almost the same speed the cost of living has risen.

For instance, a double room with bath in a good Rome hotel cost 31,600 lire—about $43—last year and now costs 36,000 lire. But that's still about $43, because of the different exchange rate.

Better yet, men's shoes that sold for 25,000 lire this year, but that's really down to $36. Men's suits that were 80,000 lire—$128—last year are down to $102 now. Women's shoes that were $40 last year are down to $37.50 this year.

Obviously, a pocket calculator might be a good thing to bring along to figure out whether you're getting a bargain.

"We heard the dollar was strong in Europe, so we're counting on doing a lot of shopping," said a Chicago school teacher making her first trip to Italy in 13 years. "But those thousands of lire can get confusing."

American visitors may also come out a little further ahead because inflation at home should have resulted in an increase in the number of dollars in their pockets.

Tourism is one of the few bright spots in Italy's otherwise gloomy economic picture, and the government is counting on it to bring in badly needed foreign currency. The sharp increases in oil prices in 1973-74 set Italy on a downhill economic slide, and fears by the wealthy and upper middle class that Communists will get in the next coalition government have caused a flight of Italian private capital.

"Italy is a foreigner's paradise," said Corriere della Sera, the respected Milan newspaper, in a front-page headline Monday after preliminary figures showed record Easter tourist crowds.

Corriere called it "the big invasion of strong money."

It was not an overstatement. Since January, as Italy has moved from one political and economic crisis to another, the national currency has tottered accordingly.

The dollar the German mark and the Swiss franc buy some 25 per cent more lire than they did at the start of the year. The dollar closed Monday at 878.50 lire, compared to 686 in mid-January. Even the British pound and the French franc are up about 15 per cent against the lira.

"The Easter figures are a good sign and we hope the trend holds," said the spokesman for ENIT, the national tourist office, after first reports indicated record numbers of foreigners flocked though the Brenner Pass in the Alps and other frontier points.

Some 50,000 foreigners visited Venice alone over the Easter weekend.

New manager chosen by WIDB directors

Larry Davis, 21, senior in broadcast sales and management, has been approved as the new general manager of student radio station WIDB by the WIDB Board of Directors.

"With a station that will become increasingly dependent on its own sales revenue, Larry is just the person to lead WIDB. He has great leadership qualifications," said former general manager Mike Hillstrom.

Davis was the assistant sales manager for fall semester and in January was named the assistant to the general manager.

Davis came to WIDB from WFRX-FM, West Frankfort, Ill., where he worked in announcing, copywriting, sportscasting and production for six years. Davis graduated from John A. Logan College, Marion, Ill., with an associate degree in science in 1974. As general manager, Davis will work closely with the station's sales department. He says he will also place emphasis on employee relations during his term.

State legislators to discuss mental health programs

The contribution of community mental health clinics will be the topic of a conference to be held from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday at the Mt. Vernon Ramada Inn.

Incumbent and present state legislators will meet with counselors, social workers and individuals from the Area Service Providers Association to discuss the impact of community mental health.

The Jackson County Community Mental Health Center will be participating with agencies from 27 counties in Southern Illinois.

Gene Jacobs, coordinator of emergency programs for the Jackson County Community Mental Health Center, said that 80 per cent of the $13 billion budget is being spent on state institutions while the number of people in state institutions has dropped from 45,000 to 15,000 in the last five years.

This drop, Jacob says, is largely due to the efforts of community facilities. One purpose of the conference is to look at allocations of money to state and local facilities. The aim is to develop a good, efficient human service program.

Legislators will lunch with persons from their own districts to provide further discussion time. Area residents are welcome.

Search for dog who bit student still underway

A medium sized white and black dog who bit an SIU student is still being sought to prevent the student from having to undergo a painful series of rabies shots. The dog was tied outside the Lewis Park IGA store around 5 p.m. Monday.

To avoid the shots, the dog must be found and put under observation for 10 days.

Anyone who might own the dog or provide information about a dog fitting the description is urged to call Barb at 549-1064.

Soviet women beat Stars

By Pat Matrezi
Student Writer

Three members of the SIU women's basketball team competed against the touring Soviet women's Olympic team Tuesday night at Quincy College.

Jan Winkler, Jeri Hoffman and Helen Meyer, playing for a team composed of Illinois All-Stars, saw an extremely quick and tall Soviet team run away from them, 135-23.

Hoffman, 6-foot, couldn't match up with any of the Russian forwards. The average height of the Soviet forwards was 6-foot-3.

The game itself was a lesson in the art of running the fast break. A typical Russian play saw 7-foot-

2 Uliana Semanova grab a defensive rebound and fire an outlet pass to fleet-footed Nadehda Zakharova. A pinpoint accurate pass from Zakharova was usually received by a trailing Soviet teammate and resulted in two easy points for them.

The Soviets' height advantage enabled them to control the offensive and defensive boards and forced the All-Stars to take outside shots with little chance of rebounding their missed shots.

By halftime, the Russians had built a 62-12 lead.

Winkler and Hoffman accounted for all the All-Stars' first-half points as each tallied six.

Winkler finished with eight points, high scorer for the All-Stars. Nadehda Shuvaeva pumped in 20 points for the Soviet women.

The Illinois All-Stars found the going rough. Olympic rules were used in the game, and more body contact was allowed than they usually experience.

Another difference they discovered was that the referee didn't have to touch the ball after a violation. Consequently, the All-Stars, as well as the Russians, had to chase after the ball when the play was whistled for violations. The clock remained running during that time.

The Soviet women are next scheduled to meet the U.S. Women's National team in the sixth game of their eight game tour as a part of the Olympic development process.

JV softballers lose to Logan

John A. Logan College found its lost pitcher Wednesday and the result was a 6-4 victory over the SIU junior varsity softball squad at Southern's home field.

Frisbee contest scheduled for men, women

Many people have fun tossing and throwing frisbees, but on May 2 students will be competing in a frisbee contest.

Both men and women can enter the contest, which will include accuracy and distance divisions.

The contest will be held in the Old Main courtyard with graduate assistants judging the throws. Men and women will be judged separately.

In throwing for accuracy, the contestant will throw 10 consecutive times, 25 yards away from a 12 foot circle. Points will be awarded for throws that land in the circle.

In throwing for distance, the contestant will throw three consecutive times. Throws will be made from behind a starting line and must land in between the sideline boundaries. The throw will be measured from the starting line to where the frisbee lands.

Dogs for winner

Donna Robinson was unable to pitch for Logan. Robinson was able and on the mound, striking out four and walking four on her way to victory.

Both teams punched out seven hits, but Southern led the error department with three to Logan's solo miscue. Southern lead 3-2 going into the third, but three runs by Logan clinched the victory, which slid Southern's slate to 3-4.

The leading Saluki hitter was center fielder Terry Haas, going for three in the game. Her two hits were singles.

Friday the varsity takes on the University of Missouri-St. Louis at 3:30 p.m. on its home field across from the new recreation building.

A package of hot dogs will be the prize when the Road Runners Club holds its First Annual Pig Pen Race Sunday. The 5-mile foot race is scheduled to start at 2 p.m. in front of the west entrance to the SIU Arena.

Fun runs of one-half, 2.2 and 4 miles are scheduled for the same place at 1:30. Certificates will be awarded to all finishers in the fun run.

In the 5-mile run, SIU student Ed Zeman will be attempting to extend his string of victories to seven for the spring season. Zeman's most recent victories came in a 5.6-mile road run April 11 and in the April 4 one-hour run. In the latter event, he covered 10 miles in 54:25.

'Almost Anything Goes' when 25 teams get together

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Everything short of tripping, whipping or kicking your opponent will be the order of the day Saturday when competition in "Almost Anything Goes" gets underway.

The Vets Club, Student Government, women's intramurals and the Recreation Club are sponsoring this "sporting" event Saturday at Evergreen Terrace. Twenty-five teams will compete beginning at 10 a.m. in five events that are designed after ABC's television show "Almost Anything Goes."

Al Moller, vice president of the Vets Club, estimated that it will take five hours for the 25 teams to complete the five wild and wacky events.

All proceeds from "Almost Anything Goes" are being donated to Special Olympics. Each team must pay a $25 entry fee. The Vets Club hopes to make additional money at the party it will hold following the competition at Giant City. According to Moller, the club is bringing a band in from St. Louis and beer will be sold at the party. The party will be held at a site to the left of the entrance of Giant City off Giant City Black Top Road.

Originally, Moller said the club wanted to sell beer during the competition at Evergreen Terrace and the party would also have been held there. However, the city will not grant a liquor license enabling the Vets Club to sell liquor on that site.

Moller said they figure to make about $700 on Saturday. "We could make about $1000 if we could sell beer at Evergreen Terrace all day," Moller said.

The teams consist of 15 members each. Moller said four of the five events will require the full squad to compete. The five events are an obstacle course, a blindfold race, a relay, tank competition and the four-foot cage ball event.

The tank competition involves putting several team members in a refrigerator box and running over a designated course.

"A cage ball is a big, really light ball," Moller explained about the cage ball event. "There will be a line drawn down the middle of the field and two teams will push the ball back forth across the line. The team that has the ball on its side of the line after a specified time, is the loser."

The winner of the competition will receive a team trophy and individual trophies from one of the sponsors, Millers Brewery Company. Second and third place team trophies will also be awarded. Besides the cooperation of Millers, Vets Club treasurer Jim Fischer said Student Government has been very helpful.

"We went to the Student Government with our plans and told them what we needed and it only took them two minutes to decide they would help us," Fischer said.

"Originally, the Vets wanted to organize a Superstars competition," Moller said. "We were going to compete against fraternities, clubs and other organizations. But then other people heard about it, like Student Government and women's intramurals, and the thing really got big."

A meeting for all team captains is scheduled for 4 p.m. Friday at the Student Activities Center. Moller said all teams should be assembled at Evergreen Terrace at 9:15 Saturday morning.

The first and second place finishers will be among six teams that will compete in a similar "Almost Anything Goes" May 7 in the Arena. Teams representing Jackson, Williamson and Franklin Counties, and a team representing the SIU faculty will also be in the Arena event.

The Arena's "Almost Anything Goes" is being sponsored by the SIU Arena management and will be filmed by the same people who do the show for ABC. It is not certain yet what will be done with the film.

Five Carbondale students in YMCA swimming meet

Seven area high school students, five from Carbondale, are in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. for the National YMCA Swimming and Diving Championship, which will run through Saturday.

The meet, which is being held for the fourth year, will have about 3,000 participants ranging from 12 to 18-years-old. There are 36 individual swimming and diving categories.

Of the seven area participants, there are three girls and four boys. From Carbondale, the contestants and their categories are: Dana Dwyer, 200-yard butterfly and 100 and 200 breaststroke; Corinna Maleke 200 and 500 freestyle and 200 individual medley; Becky Brooks, 100, 200 and 500 freestyle; Chris Phillips, 500 and 1650 freestyle and 400 yard individual medley; and Matt Brooks, 100 and 200 freestyle and 200 backstroke.

Mark Nelson, from Marion, will swim in the 100 and 200-yard freestyle and Earl Mauding from Murphysboro will compete in the 200 and 400 individual medley and the 200 backstroke.

Netters are home with four matches

The SIU tennis team will open a short homestand Friday when it takes on the Jayhawks of Kansas University at 2 p.m. While that match is going on, Eastern Kentucky will meet Tennessee, also on the University tennis courts.

Saturday, SIU will play Eastern Kentucky at 9 a.m. and Tennessee at 2 p.m.

The Salukis were scheduled to play SIU-Edwardsville last Tuesday, but because of a schedule mix-up, Edwardsville did not make the trip to Carbondale. Saluki coach Dick Lefevre said the match has been rescheduled for 2 p.m. Monday. SIU's record is 7-5.

"It's a good thing Edwardsville didn't show up," Lefevre said, "because the match would have been rained out."

Barring inclement weather, SIU will have a fight on its rackets the whole weekend. The Salukis lost to Kansas earlier this year 5-4.

"We didn't have our No. 2 man (Felix Ampon) so that made them pretty tough," Lefevre commented. "They're a tough team. Their No. 1 player (Bill Clark) is excellent."

In the first meeting, SIU won the No. 2 and 6 singles and No. 1 and 2 doubles. Mel Ampon and Jeff Lubner are the No. 1 SIU doubles team. Lefevre said Ampon and Lubner's victory was quite an accomplishment.

"Kansas' No. 1 doubles team beat the University of Southern California's No. 2 team at the NCAA meet last year and that is saying something."

SIU's lineup one through six in singles is: Mel Ampon, Felix Ampon, Jeff Lubner, Neville Conlin, Neville Kennerley and either Sam Dean or Jay Evert. Doubles: M. Ampon-Lubner, F. Ampon-Dean or Evert, Conlin-Kennerley.

SIU thinclads at Pantherette Relays

By Scott Burnside
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Another confrontation between the SIU and Illinois women track teams will be on tap Saturday during the third annual Pantherette Relays at Charleston.

Seven schools are entered, but based on the results of University of Illinois Invitational last weekend, the fight for first place will be between the Illini and the Salukis.

At the Illinois Invitational SIU came in second, about ten points behind the winning home team.

Eastern was seventh and another team entered in Saturday's meet, Western Michigan, finished in the lower third at Illinois.

All this would indicate another confrontation between the two schools, but SIU track coach Claudia Blackman isn't that concerned about the battle between the two squads.

"What I'm trying to do this weekend is determine some of the places we have to fill for the state meet," Blackman said.

She did admit it would always be nice to win, however.

"At the state meet we can enter a maximum of four in each event," she said. But what they've been doing in most meets, including this one, is you can only enter three.

In order to find out what extra points SIU may be able to pick up at state, Blackman plans to run athletes for exhibition at Eastern.

Athletes participating in exhibition at track meets don't score points.

Blackman said Maria Boyer will be trying the shot put for the first time. She said on Boyer's first time throwing the shot, she asked, "how do you do this?" and threw the shot 30 feet.

The farthest an SIU athlete has thrown the shot this season has been 30 feet-11 inches, so Boyer could have good chance to score points at state.

Also in the throwing events, either Sue Visconage or Bonnie Foley will be throwing the discus in exhibition.

Long jumper Kathy "Stretch" Vondrasak is entered in the 220-yard dash.

Another exhibition runner will be Cindy Kaas in the 100-yard dash. Blackman said Kaas ran a good 100-yard dash in a 220 during one meet, so she is getting a chance in that event.

"I'd certainly like to beat Illinois, but I'm mainly concerned about the kids polishing up their events," Blackman said. "The most important time is in two weeks at state."

Because the Illinois meet is also at Eastern, this weekend's meet is doubly important.

"It gives the kids and idea of not only what the throwing and running areas are like," Blackman said, "but also they can find out where to find shade, which might be important in a two day event."

Eastern's track facilities are good, especially the running surface, she said.

SIU's track is considered hard by many track athletes, so the soft Eastern track could be a blessing, especially for the SIU runners.

"Mentally it could help them, especially with the soft surface their legs may really feel like running," she said.

Saluki tracksters may need that extra lift, because the Pantherette schedule of events may hurt SIU's team effort.

Blackman said because of the schedule, SIU's top hurdler Mary Shirk won't probably run in both the 400-meter hurdles and the 440-yard dash, which are scheduled too close together.

Another runner with this kind of difficulty Saturday will be long distance specialist Jean Ohly, who hasn't had a victory since the Saluki Invitational on April 3rd. Blackman said Ohly should win Saturday.

Philip Robins wins player of week award from Valley

For the third straight week, an SIU player has won the Missouri Valley Conference Athlete of the week award. The Valley named Philip Robins for the honor for his 55-5½ triple jump at the Kansas Relays last weekend.

Robins jump was more than three feet better than the previous Valley mark of 52-5¾. Besides being a Kansas Relays record, the mark also set new SIU and state records.

"Phil is truly a class athlete," Saluki Coach Lew Hartzog said. "He also jumped over 54 feet twice in the competition. These jumps are nothing sudden, they are a result of four years of continuous work."

Robins, a 6-foot-1, 165 native of Nassau, Bahamas, is in his final year at SIU. He is hoping to make the Olympics to represent his country.

Robins is still working on phases of his triple jump to increase his distance. He is now working on his jump phase.

Two weeks ago, Kevin Waldrop and Dewey Robinson of the baseball Salukis shared the MVC award and last week it was won by javelin thrower Bob Roggy.

Years of change witnessed by these eyes

By Mark Kazlowski
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

Few people have seen the changes in men's intercollegiate athletics at SIU the way George Davis has. And few people have enjoyed themselves as much as he has during the last decade and a half.

Davis, a compact, 60-year-old Harrisburg native, is the athletic facilities supervisor for the men's athletic department. In simpler terms, he is the head equipment manager for all the men's teams.

For the past 15-plus years he has been supervising the distribution of equipment. In December he will retire to his farm near Harrisburg.

"I want to enjoy living," he said. "I have always enjoyed my work here and get a lot of pleasure over the annual turnover of athletes and workers in here, but I'm getting too old to enjoy it anymore."

Davis is one of the few persons on the athletic department staff who remembers the days before the coaches' offices were located in the spacious Arena. Those were the days when the athletic department offices were crammed into Davies Gym and portable dividers were used to separate the diminutive offices.

"If somebody sneezed in the corner, you knew who it was," he said.

It was also a time before SIU offered scholarships to the athletes. Instead, they were given jobs on campus to assist in paying for tuition, fees and housing.

Davis has fond memories of the old office location. "The old gym was a loafing place," he said. "I used to see every one of them (athletes). The athletes would hang around over there.

Kazually speaking

"Here you're kind of isolated from the majority of the campus since the Arena is on the outer perimeter."

Davis' office is in the equipment room in the guts of the Arena. In the spacious room is a series of cages which separates equipment of one sport from that of another.

"The set-up there was a little more conducive to closeness," he said of the old gym. "Up there we were all thrown into one room."

"Times have changed. There is not the close-knit feeling of the whole area that there was up there."

Things have not been made any easier either. Instead of having only one equipment room to operate, now there are two. The football team has moved to the stadium.

"I'm going to be honest with you," he said. "I don't think I could sit down and enumerate the things I do. There are just so many little things you have to make sure are done."

Davis has 10 student workers to supervise now as compared to 160 before scholarships were offered. To him it is an improvement.

"When I first started, my total responsibility was the student work program," he said. "I assigned athletes to jobs."

"Personally, I like the operation better than when I had 160 kids to look out for."

"One of my biggest pleasures in working here was working with athletes. The association with young people keeps you thinking young whether you are or not."

"That's what I'm going to miss. I'm going to miss my contacts."

Davis got kind of a far away look in his eyes when he began talking about the athletes he has known.

"I don't have any just real favorites," he said. "They're just people who'll stick with you and always remember you."

He pointed proudly at 16 post cards tacked to the bulletin board that he had received from several of the former Salukis.

"Those kind of guys you remember not because they're favorites, but because they're good people," he said.

Davis said he has never had any serious problems with athletes during his tenure.

"You try to forget the problems and look back for memory's sake at the pleasant things," he said. "You like to sit down every once in a while and think about days gone by."

Davis suggested two reasons behind his retirement. "The 92-mile round trip everyday is beginning to get to me," he said with a chuckle. "By the time I quit, I will have driven half a million miles to work." He estimated he puts 100,000 miles on his car every three years.

"I've enjoyed it," he said. "But this work that I have to do is a younger man's work."
